Jeremy Rubenstein (Ruben-steen)
Founder, Creative Director Box Out Productions

Jeremy is an educator, producer and social entrepreneur.

He is a graduate of the Pennsylvania State University with his masters in Early Childhood development, degrees in Journalism, Theater, and History. He's studied clowning in South Paris where holds a certificate in eccentric performance, as well as studying pizza making, where he is a master pizzaoleo (pronunciation PizzAH-EE-YOLOO).

He has been published in several academic periodicals on the topics of bystander empowerment and creating empathy among students.

Jeremy has over six years of classroom teaching experience, from the college level to early childhood development

Jeremy has delivered hundreds of parent workshops and faculty professional development to school sites across the United States as well as Korea and Taiwan. He most recently appeared at the White House for Former President Obama's Summit on Bullying Prevention.

Jeremy spent his youth between Los Angeles, California and Lancaster, Pennsylvania. He currently lives in Queens with his puppy named Scottie, and his fiancée. Outside of work, he enjoys juggling, going to museums, and spending as much time at the beach as possible. I present, Mr. Jeremy Rubenstein.
