

Peace Table Comprehension Checklist

- There is a complete Peace Table in place.
  - Refer to Peace Table Setup Checklist
- Students and teachers know that peace tables are used for two things:
  - Quiet self reflection
  - To invite others to solve potential conflicts or concerns facing students
- Teacher has established a time during the day when a peace table can be used
- Students are able to model “I” statements
- Students know the order of operation while at the Peace Table.
- The person that did the inviting knows they need to start the timer.
- The person that did the inviting is able to begin with an “I-statement”
- Both participants at the peace table have been able to use a peaceful tone when at the peace table.
- After three minutes, if the students haven’t been able to come up with a resolution, students know they must leave the peace table and return to what they were doing.
  - They can return to the peace table another day.
- Students have been using the peace table since it was implemented
